Edward Davidson born in Edinburgh in 1962.

Scottish artist Edward Davidson is entirely self-taught and works from his studio at home and his studio in Killiecrankie, Perthshire, now part of The Cairngorms National Park. Edward is a member of the Scottish Ornithologists Club (SOC) and Scottish Wildlife Trust (SWT). He has a great passion for natural history and Scottish landscapes.

He spends many hours out in the field photographing his subjects. This can be as diverse as filming gannets on the Bass Rock at North Berwick, as to a safari in Africa to photographing lions. It is from his favourites that he decides his next painting. Edward gets immense pleasure from painting and hopes that others experience as much pleasure from looking at his finished work.

Edwards paintings are much admired and sought after. Especially his puffin paintings and prints with their distinctive blue background and beautifully detailed painted rocks and puffins. His painting Puffin Rock has been purchased by Lord James Douglas Hamilton (The 11th Earl of Selkirk) and hangs in his Scottish stately home.
